00:00	The camera cuts to aerial footage of runway 07 of Sydney Airport, which shows residences 600 metres from the runway threshold. A caption reads “Sydney Airport runway 600 metres from suburban residences”.	Unlike Sydney Kingsford Smith Airport, careful planning over the last three decades has protected the Badgerys Creek site
00:08	The camera cuts back to Badgerys Creek, with three long-range aerial shots of the Western Sydney Airport site. Three captions flash on screen. The first reads “Western Sydney Airport 10.5 kilometres from suburban residences”. The second reads “Effective land-use planning has protected the surrounding area”. The third reads “Melbourne Airport’s curfew-free operations add $590 million to the Victorian economy each year”.	from encroaching residential development. This means a Western Sydney Airport will be capable of operating without a curfew, meeting the needs of the community.
